Water Conduits.

A report was circulated in this vicinity some weeks ago that a resident of Braintree had removed a galvanized iron pipe from his well, after submerging a specimen of the water to a well-known chemist of Boston, who pronounced it dangerous to health, it being highly charged with poisonous properties from the action of which death have ensued in families residing in other towns in this State. Dr. Smith of Melrose, records the illness of two young ladies and the death of their brother, by the use of water flowing through these pipes. He says that about a year ago Mr. W. P. Sargent, Chairman of the Board of Spot Pond Water Commissioners in Melrose, connected his well and a force pump in the kitchen with upwards of seventy feet of one and a half inch galvanized iron pipe; and to facilitate the working of the pump, a large reservoir constructed of galvanized iron was placed near to it. Without entering into the details of the minor ailment of the family during the past twelve months, obviously resulting from zinc poisoning, but which were not sufficiently alarming to be brought to the notice of the physician, it may be stated that in November last the two daughters were seized with symptoms of a dangerous character, which proved to be due to zinc poisoning. The same day the son was also attacked and died in a few days, a post mortem examination confirming the opinion that the action of the zinc on the nervous centres, inducing paralysis of the heart, was the immediate cause of death. Examination of the pipe, ordered to be removed from the well, showed a thick incrustation, throughout its whole inside, of a white substance on uncoated iron, with no traces of its metallic zinc covering. This white powder, analyzed by Dr. J. R. Nichols, chemist, of Boston, was found to consist of earthenware of zinc with a little oxide of iron. This pipe was put in position about six years ago, and more or less water which passed through it has been used for this family.

"These cases," says Dr. Nichols, in the Journal of Chemistry, "show that zinc is a slow but fatal poison, when introduced into the system through the medium of water, and will serve to put families on their guard against the use of water flowing through galvanized iron pipes."

The opinion of Dr. Nichols, who is a conscientious and practical chemist, is entitled to much consideration, and the subject should be seriously considered by all who have this description of water conduits in use. But no similar objections have been urged against the use of lead pipe, the question naturally occurs, "What kind of material shall we use, for the convenience of water?" We believe under certain conditions, lead conduits have indicated that they are not altogether safe, but the idea that they are invariably prejudicial to health is refuted in a report made by a committee of the British government appointed to examine the water supply to the city of London, which says "The most practical, perhaps, of our observations is the extraordinary influence indicated by the small quantity of carbonic acid which water usually contains upon the results. This effect is, fortunately, to neutralize, to an extraordinary degree the usual solvent action on lead which water exercises through the agency of the oxygen dissolved in it."

The soluble oxide of lead is converted into the carbonate, which though not absolutely insoluble, appears to be the least soluble of all the salts of lead. Pure water did not dissolve a quantity of carbonate of lead greater than one sixtieth of a grain to a gallon, or one part of lead in 4,000,000 of water; while water, on the other hand, which contained already so much as six grains of oxide of lead dissolved in it to the gallon, had the quantity of metal reduced to one fifty-seventh of a grain by free exposure to the atmosphere for twenty-four hours, the lead being deposited as carbonate of lead in consequence of the absorption of carbonic acid gas. So minute a trace of lead remaining in the water could have no possible influence on health.

Carbonic acid is usually present in well, river, and lake waters, in the quantity sufficient for protection; and the immunity of such waters from lead impregnation we would ascribe often to their carbonic acid than to the salts which they may also contain; for lead placed in distilled water which has been boiled to expel its carbonic acids is no longer sufficiently protected by the addition of the same salts. The properties of water which enable it to act at times with unusual vigor upon lead are little understood, and seem often to arise from the accidental action of local and very limited causes, such as the presence of decaying leaves and impurities which may only affect a small volume of water. These causes are of a kind most to be dreaded in the supply of a single residence, in which the volume of water might at a time assume the same dangerous composition. But such causes, probably, often counteract each other when large volumes of water are mixed together, as in the supply for a town. It is at least difficult to account otherwise for the fact, that no recent and authenticated case can be cited of the health of any of the numerous towns having supplied with soft water being affected by the use of leaded distribution tubes, although apprehensions were often entertained from the introduction of soft water, as in Boston, where the subject has excited much attention, and at New York since the introduction of the Croton water.

A large number of galvanized iron pipes were laid in this vicinity during the drought of last summer, and it would be of much interest and perhaps profit to the public, if some of our readers who have used pipes of this kind, would enlighten the community with observations of their effects, whether prejudicial to health, or otherwise.

If they are so dangerous as represented by eminent medical men, we need more general investigation of the subject, which concerns the health of many families.

Benefit Entertainment.

An entertainment of Dramatic Readings for the benefit of a resident of Weymouth Landing, is to be given next Monday evening, in Washington Hall. See advertisement.

South Weymouth.

Mrs. Editor:—Among the institutions of our village, established to instruct and amuse us, the Dramatic Club merits a passing notice. It was recently organized with the title of "The Columbian Dramatic Club," which reminds one more of C. Columbus, than of Shakespeare. But who cares for the name, if the Club gets the fame? And it will be likely to get that, with Mr. D. S. Murray as President, and the array of amateur talent announced on the bills. A few evenings since I witnessed, at Union Hall, the performance of two plays by this Club. The first piece was the "Last Leaf," and for amateurs, was a very creditable performance. With more study and stage practice, they will be able to give us an agreeable entertainment. The second play, "The Mischiefous Nigger," is one of those immensely extravagant pieces, too absurd for criticism, but which never fail to bring down the house. The part of the "Nigger" was well taken by Mr. William D. Sargent, who is, decidedly, most effective as a comedian. If the management will permit, I would like to suggest the propriety of sloughing off from plays, those coarse jests and phrases that disfigure even so low a play as "The Mischiefous Nigger."

We have had two Wedding Anniversaries recently. The first was the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. John Curtis, that came off week before last at Union Hall. I was not present, but am told there was a gaily gathered company of friends, who testified their regard for Mr. and Mrs. Curtis, by valuable presents. Mr. Curtis, who is somewhat of an invalid, was presented with a luxurious silver clasp on an easy and sick chair combined. There was also the chunky sandy silver dollars, that rounds out boyhood days.

The other celebration was what is called a "Variety Wedding," which means, that anything from diamonds to w-o-l-nut-marmalade may be handed in, and in honor of, and for the benefit of, Mr. and Mrs. Ois Cushing. The prince of Emerson is Ois, and his course, he was the princess for him, express.

Their friends are a legion. Everett Hall never contained a larger, more sociable, and jovial party, than assembled there last Monday evening. Rev. Mr. Baker made a short and encouraging address, and offered a fervent prayer. Mr. Shaw showed us a pair that had been worn two winters and still remained soft and pliable. His friend would have got up a fine line of these, this season if the skins could have been obtained, but now had been tanned for this purpose.

Mr. Shaw thinks that our tanners would do well to select from their country skins a few of the fine-haired and best looking dark colored ones, and tan them with the hair on, so that next season may be found in the market, next season, some skins suitable for this kind of work. Black, or dark reddish brown will be a desirable color.

This unique looking boot is not the first product of Mr. Shaw's inventive genius. He patented a heel plate about four years ago which has had a pretty large run for the last three years, having been attached to all his firm's boots, which are sold by Fogg, Houghton & Coolidge. It is called the excisor plate. Mr. Shaw has also shown us a new style of cloth long boot, with a steel band in front, which makes a nice and strong dress house or summer boot, and he is, besides, the inventor of quite a number of other improvements in the shoe line.

East Braintree.

The School in this part of the town was examined on Tuesday last by Mr. A. Mason, chairman of the School Committee, and Dr. Dearing. There were a great many of the parents, of the children present, as well as others interested in the prosperity of the school. The examination was thorough, and to the entire satisfaction of the school.

There were nice refreshments of all kinds, especially the latter. Everything helped to renew our youth and expand our hearts; old friendships were strengthened, new acquaintances formed, and we feel braver and bettered as we journey on. If there are any more worthy couples intending to celebrate their marriage, let me assure you, C. Lark.

Sunday Amusement.

The Legislature has this week considered a bill for opening libraries and reading-rooms on Sunday, the debate being one of an animated character. Among the opposers of the bill was Representative Tirrell, of Weymouth, who said it astonished him to find that the bill was reported by four of the committee, three of whom were clergymen and he was satisfied that they were influenced by outside pressure, hence the bill. It was well known that the City Council of Boston had been for some years in favor of opening the Public Library on the Lord's day, and had offered the attendants double pay to work on that day, but they were unanimous in declining to work on that day, and it is more meritorious, when it is born in mind that the teacher receives the smallest response to their efforts, and which is so sweet, and so necessary to bear them up in the faithful discharge of their duties.

The greatest interest, however, was manifested in the examination of the high class, taught by Miss Martha Reed. Miss Reed is a first class teacher, understanding her duties thoroughly, and seems to be at home in all the studies of her class. We were forcibly impressed with the truth, in consequence of having witnessed the examination of Miss Reed's class, that the knowledge which one can use is after all the only real knowledge—the only knowledge which has life and growth in it, and converts it into practical experience. Singing will be one of the features of the occasion, with something to refresh the tinner man. Mr. Willis is expected to be present and make a few interesting remarks. A list of toasts has been prepared, to which members of the class will respond. "The Class Chronicle," a paper published in the interest of the class, and under the editorial charge of William W. Burke, will appear on that occasion, and each person who has been connected with the class is expected to contribute an article.

Not the least enjoyable event of the evening will be the response to "Our Moral Classroom," by a young lady who, "is reasonable to suppose, can say something interesting on the subject, having had experience." All we have, then joined the association, together with those who have requested to send their address to Wm. W. Burke, Box 29, East Weymouth. Members of the association are informed that the dues, $1.00 for gentlemen, and 50 cents for ladies, is payable either to the Treasurer, Miss Annie Blanchard, or W. W. Burke, Secretary. As nearly all the class have joined the association, it is hoped that the remaining few will follow their example and do so immediately.

PROFESSOR CADWELL, who is becoming quite celebrated as an illusionist, gave one of his imminable entertainments at Lincoln Hall, last evening, and will repeat it at the same place this evening for the benefit of those who were unable to attend last night. In Quincy he gave eight performances to large audiences, and in many other places he has been very successful. As the business has more than doubled during the past six months, it will be seen that with proper economy in management, the next dividend must be greatly increased, making it a decided pecuniary advantage to patronize the store; and tending to lower the prices of goods.

Lotto.

Jan. 29th, in East Weymouth, a large Pocket Book containing about $11 and some very valuable bills against parties in this town, will be worth nothing to the finder or anybody else. I have had most of them five years, and I would like to keep them about one year longer, so that they will be outlawed and settled up.

My name is in full in the pocket book, and if I cannot obtain the money will the finder please send me the Pocket Book.

Also, one long Seal Skin Driving

Glove lost near Lowell Bucknell.

If the finder will call, or send it to me, I will give that other one, as it is of no use to me.

Mrs. Editor:—I believe that South Weymouth may justly claim to take the lead of all the "suburban cities" in the matter of celebrating marriage anniversaries. Last Saturday evening a quiet party assembled at "Union Hall" and spent a very pleasant season in celebrating the 25th anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. John Curtis. The girls were not numerous, but they were valuable, and many of them had that peculiar "ring," so seldom heard, and yet so pleasant to the ear. They were presented by a few remarks from a friend and gratefully accepted, and duly appreciated. For obvious reasons a married demonstration was made on the occasion.

Great inconvenience is being felt by many of our citizens for the want of water. We hear of several instances where wells which withheld the severe drought of last summer have now become dry, and of course the only method of procuring water is by having it carried from the Neponset or from the reservoir.

(From the Plymouth Monitor.)

Very few of the large number of watering places and summer resorts, offer better facilities than old Plymouth.

The location is healthy, the air good, water the best in the world, and plenty of it; while all the houses in the village, wherever they may be located, are within five minutes walk of a bathing house.

The guests continued to arrive until quite a late hour, and the girls came pouring in faster than many busy hands could arrange them. The large hall upon which they were placed presented a sight most curious to behold, of all the names by which such assemblies are called, this was most remarkable. It was indeed a variety wedding. It seemed that every conceivable thing that could be imagined was brought into the picture. A room was filled with bright eyes, and happy faces, catching the inspiration of youth, and giving themselves up to a free participation of the enjoyments of the occasion.

FRIDAY, FEB. 10, 1871.

The Comin' President.

In these times of wonderful development of new phases in society, he is a rash prophet who undertakes a horoscope of the future condition of affairs, basing his prophecy upon what has occurred in the past. Present changes and transformations are indicative of still further progression, and what would now be considered an astounding development in social or political movements may yet become an accomplished fact and pass from the realm of the marvellous into that of common acceptance. In this light the strenuous efforts now making for the advancement of woman to a status of equality with the sterner sex in the race of political preferment and governmental power, assumes an importance which may produce results surprising to the present generation, but accepted by future statesmen (for states-women) as one of the usual and common conditions of society. The occupancy of the pulpit, the lecture platform, the editorial chair, and the political arena, by the fair sex, has already become quite an every-day affair, and now, to cap the climax, we have a well-edited and well-filled sheet, presenting, on its first page the title, "Woolfull & Cliftin's Weekly," and underneath in glaring capitals, the announcement, "nomination for President of the U. S. in 1872, Victoria C. Woolfull, subject to ratification by the National Convention." Such an announcement will, of course, be received with a general smile of incredulity when the success of the candidate for presidential honors is taken into consideration;—this sudden reversal in political matters not being at all probable. Still, it is a fact that with Mrs. Woolfull's early seeks to gain popularity by this impulsive desire to seize the cause along with the success of the candidate for presidential honors in taken into consideration;—this sudden reversal in political matters not being at all probable. Still, it is a fact that with Mrs. Woolfull's she could not have imagined, while living, and even we did not realize, till he was gone, how large a place he held in the hearts of the people. Dr. F. D. Goss, the organist, who took place in the Cribbush church, on Friday, under the auspices of the Free Masons, was numerously attended. The church was filled, to its utmost capacity, and many were unable to gain entrance. Besides the John Carter Lodge, of which the Dr. was a member, there were present, as organizations, the Old Colony Commandery of Knight Templars, and Hartstall Post, No. 74, G.A.R. Rev. Mr. Chamberlain, of Stoughton, delivered the funeral discourse. It was estimated there were, at least, 1500 persons in, and about, the church, among whom were large numbers of Catholics, who lamented as for one of their own. In all that assembly there was not one curious sight-seeker. Impugning, gaudy, and ceremonial, were lost from sight and thought, save as they contributed in doing honor to the departed. The address abounded in words of comfort, and was not lacking in rhetorical pathos, and its most eloquent passage was this:—"It was good to the poor; and God will not forget him who remembers them." Yet it is

After conclusion of the service, as the great concern of mourners passed before the altar, to look for the last time, on the long-familiar face, warm hands, which, having, in dire extremity of pain and disease, had snatched from the tightened grasp of the destroyer, were laid tenderly on his cold forehead; and by the fragrant flowers, kind friends had placed upon hisasket left the most precious offering ever dropped at the feet of the dead—

Every worker who toils for the good of humanity, we must not forget, that the world moves, and what is seemingly impossible to-day, may be an event of to-morrow. To define woman's particular sphere is a question which is baffleing the minds and pens of many a male philosopher, and inciting the investigation of many female writers and thinkers. We are not disposed to take a literal view of the declaration that there is nothing new under the sun; but rather believe that we are passing into a stage of development in the order of the world's history, when all things will become new in the sense of greater enlightenment in all that pertains to the good of mankind; and though the woman's movement has in some instances exhibited an apparent recklessness as to the moral welfare of both sexes, which would, like the Upas, devastate the earth, if generally accepted, it is not to be inferred that no good can come out of the effort of the better portion of mankind to attain a higher elevation;—nor is it to be looked upon as the dawn of a better day for both man and woman, and with this end in view we may welcome every worker who toils for the good of humanity."

BURLINGTON, IOWA, Jan. 26, 1871.

The last rail was laid and the last spike was driven on the Burlington Cedar Rapids and Minnesota Railway, near Sioux, today. This completes the Grand Trunk of a Railway which brings St. Louis and St. Paul 90 miles nearer than ever before, and about 40 miles the route from St. Paul to Chicago. A contract has been made between the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad and this road, whereby the latter will be part of the former, but the price paid by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad is to be paid by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad.

A recently U. S. Land Agent, at St. Louis, arrested a few weeks since, for swindling a poor home-settler out of over $200. He was found guilty, and ordered to refund the money and pay costs of court.

A delegation of Brothers from Crescent Lodge, East Weymouth, paid a visit to Rising Star Lodge of Randolph on Monday evening, the 6th inst., and had a first rate time. The evening being very pleasant, we had a ride, and arriving at the hall we found a delegation of Grand Officers present, who made an official visit. The business lasted until near midnight, after which we repaired to the Howard House, where all sat down to a bountiful repast, and every one being proficient in this branch we did not require the services of the Grand Instructor. After satisfying the inner man the time was spent in speaking, singing, &c., until an early hour, when we took our teams for home, and reached there before morning, satisfied that we had spent the time pleasantly and profitably to all.

A. Raymond, Jr., has opened the market connected with H. Loud's store, at South Braintree, where she has a husband and two children, was arrested last week in Boston for shoplifting a lot of dollars, scars, etc., valued at $5. Mrs. Jones is a good appearing and neatly dressed woman, and says that this is the first transaction of the kind that she was ever guilty of, and why she did it she cannot explain, as she had plenty of money to pay for the things, as she had for other purchases made during the afternoon. The goods were taken from the store of Jordon, Marsh & Co. (Herald).

EAST BRINGHAM, Feb. 4th, 1871.

Obituary.

On Tuesday evening last, Dr. James M. Underwood, of this place, retired, at about eight o'clock, in his usual habit, taking a newspaper with him, saying he would read awhile. At nine, his wife went to his sleeping apartment, and, as she opened the door, saw him lying in bed, on his side, with the lighted paper, on a stand before him. He appeared to be asleep, but there was a peculiar expression about his countenance which alarmed her, and she called others in, who went to his room, to find that he was not breathing, and that his pulse had stopped. Dr. Glens, being absent from the village, Dr. Duryea, of Centre Abington, was sent for, and succeeded in reviving him, but there was need to restore consciousness, but in vain. It is supposed his death was caused by heart disease, of which several of his near relatives have died. He had an extensive practice, and was universally liked, especially by the poor, from whose call for help he never turned away. Possessed of great physical strength, apparently in perfect health, in the prime of life, and in the midst of usefulness, the general announcement of his death, early on Wednesday morning, gave to this community a shock, such as it had not experienced since that terrible affair, and now, to cap the climax, we have a well-edited and well-filled sheet, presenting, on its first page the title, "Woolfull & Cliftin's Weekly," and underneath in glaring capitals, the announcement, "nomination for President of the U. S. in 1872, Victoria C. Woolfull, subject to ratification by the National Convention." Weekly Gazette and Reporter.

FRIDAY, FEB. 17, 1871.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 12th, 1870.

Mr. Editor:—No paper which I receive or read is more highly prized than the Gazette; there is there any other paper which I would not rather prefer to be without. Through its columns I learn all the local news that transpires in the good old town. And in addition to its local news, the Gazette, for its selected articles, its interesting foreign correspondence, its most typographical appearance, and its conduct generally, is greatly esteemed, and warmly welcomed. In accordance with the time honored maxim that "one good turn deserves another," I feel that I ought to contribute my mite to the Gazette, but there is so little of our local news that would be of interest to its readers that I do not think of writing to about it. I might write of things of which I know nothing—the field would be very large—but perhaps the readers of the Gazette would not be entertained thereby. John Billings, I think, says that it takes a smarter man to write good nonsense than it does to write plain common sense. In imagination I hear you say that, "if you can not make a speech or sing a hymn, tell a story." The fact is however, I never knew but three or two of which have been related through the columns of the Gazette. The other you can have of your own.

"Doesn't it sit a critic's eye?"

But pass its imperfections by. "Once upon a time," in the early days of gold mining in California, my partner and I, after a long course of close, metaphysical reasoning, came to the conclusion that, as the gold obtained in the rivers, far from the mountains, was finer than that obtained in the gulches and ravines further up, the source of the gold, which was found in the rivers, must be at their heads, in the then almost inaccessible mountains. We also had heard whispered in a mysterious manner of a party who had come out with maps to pack up the gold that one of their party had lately discovered. Putting these things together we thought best to follow the example of the early bird of classic story, and accordingly, determined to proceed at once to the fountain head of that gold which was so unevenly distributed in the rivers below.

No devout Mussulman, in his wearisome pilgrimage to worship at the shrine of the Prophet in Mecca—no enthusiastic Knight of the eleventh century in his endeavor to rescue the holy city from the possession of Infidels—no rigid and austere Puritan as he landed upon the rock-bound shores of Plymouth—was ever more in earnest, more willing to undergo privations and hardships, or make greater sacrifices, in order to carry out his firmly-fixed purpose, than were we. As we did not expect to find any trail after leaving the then outposts of civilization, and as of necessity our progress would be slow, we were obliged to carry not only our blankets, mining tools, and defensive weapons, but provisions sufficient to supply our wants for about a month. To do this we purchased a mule of noble birth and lineage ancient, of whom I shall hereafter speak. One bright Spring morning, just as the sun tinted the distant mountain tops with gold and purple, we broke camp on Expectation bar, and, bidding adieu to our mining acquaintances, slowly pursued our way up the trail leading to the ridge above. By noon, when we stopped to rest and to allow our mule to browse, we were in an unknown wilderness, "where man never trod before." During the afternoon we often were obliged to cut and to trail in order that our mule might proceed. Night found us fatigued, hungry, and sorely踳tured, not more than five miles advanced from our resting place at noon. Arrangements for passing the night were soon made under a friendly tree, and having picked out a mule, and disposed of our traps, we laid them up in our blankets near the fire, and discourse of the events of the day, and the prospects of the future. Never had I before—never have I since—experienced that sense of gloom, of utter lassitude, of perfect and almost painful solitude, that came o'er me that evening. Here we were, perhaps fifteen miles from a human being, not a sound could be heard either of bird or beast, nothing but the low rustle of the tree tops as they moved to the evening breeze. But neither gloom, nor solitude, not even fear, can long keep sleep from the eyes of men so completely exhausted as we were. Dreams of crows of gold and diamonds glistering in the light of torches might have passed through our minds, if so they were not remembered. We slept soundly and slept well. But a little while after midnight I was suddenly awakened by a frightened shout from our mule. Hastily awakening my partner we made preparations to receive the intruder, if any, in a war-like manner. But no sound could be heard. Even our mule evinced no further sign of alarm. Soon however we heard the leaves to the leeward of us stir as if pressed down by stealthily approaching feet. Before, whatever the cause of alarm, it had approached in the direction of the wind, but now it had apparently made a long circuit and was approaching to the leeward to avoid being seen by the intruder.

Opening of Libraries.—The bill introduced in the Legislature in relation to Public Libraries and Reading Rooms, did not obtain a majority vote, and was killed. Its provisions did not make the opening on the Sabbath compulsory, as we learn from Representative Pratt, but merely gave towns and cities the power to open such places, if they so decided.

Abington.—Dr. J. M. Underwood, whose sudden decease was noticed last week, had $5,000 insurance on his life in the Berkshires.

Henry Dunham, manufacturer at Abington, has failed.

The census returns of the large cities of the Union place New York the first in population, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, St. Louis, Chicago, Baltimore, Boston, Cincinnati, New Orleans, San Francisco, following in numerical order.

Rev. Mr. Rowe, of Boston, said to be a preacher of much talent, will support the pulpit of the Baptist church at Weymouth Landing, next Sabbath.

certain however, that sleep and our party, including the mule, were strangers for the remainder of that night. It is on the outset of our party's great wealth, experience like this was to fall to our lot, we hardly dare to forecast the future, and were willing to believe all the marvelous tales of the east, in which we had heard of treasures being awarded by demons and genii, and of the fiery fate of those poor mortals who had tried to obtain possession of them. Here poverty is deeply engraved on almost every thing except the soil, and the people who produce the luxuries of the world, vines and silks, live themselves in poor filthy hovels, go clothed in rags and poverty, and live on macaroni, fish, fruit and vegetables, at a cost not exceeding one dollar a week. Do you wonder that the common people of Italy are poor and God-forsaken, while they are obliged to work for the small sum of thirty cents a day, and pay their King, Vic Emmanuel, a salary of one million dollars a year? Some idea of the oppressive taxes now paid in Italy may be gathered from the following facts: While seated at a public banquet on Christmas eve, with our fellow laboring companies, the Rev. Dr. C. S. Shewell and family, of Connecticut, we learned from our next neighbor, Mr. Cevoli, of the principal Italian Bankers of Naples, that he pays an annual tax to the government of forty per cent, on the rent of his banking house, and all other property which he hires, with a double tax on the treasury. Suitable remarks were made by Dean Josiah Reed, Gates, and Engineer Tuck.

Mr. Wm. Dunham, one of the locomotive engineers of the South Shore Railroad, who it will be remembered died recently, and with convincing exactness shewed that legalizing the "Gates Ajar" of the Boston Library on the Lord's day, was only a feeder for more formidable and "liberal" inroads on sacred ground. Talk about opening the Boston Public Library on Sundays, to accommodate the workingmen, when about one hundred persons at a time could find sea-room and sitting room, and those most come trimly dressed, while the bone and sinew, the truckmen and hackmen, the bricklayers and street sweepers, most of necessity were ignored by the priests. The priests, with a view to plain common sense, in imagination I hear you say that, "if you can not make a speech or sing a hymn, tell a story." The fact is however, I never knew but three or two of which have been related through the columns of the Gazette. The other you can have of your own.

But pass its imperfections by. A lecture was delivered on Friday evening, Feb. 10, in the Vestry of the Methodist church, by the Rev. Mr. Vibbert, of Rockport, a discussion of the coming session in the Legislature (House). A large audience was present. Mr. Vibbert began his lecture by alluding to the prevalence of intemperance among the miners, and the effect of it on the social condition of the country. The speaker then went into the history of the Pilgrim church, and the difficulties it had to encounter in establishing itself in New England. He spoke of the Pilgrims as a people who had to leave their homes and families, and to start life over again in a new land. He spoke of the trials and difficulties they had to undergo, and of the great sacrifice they made in order to establish a free government. North Weymouth.

The Sewing Circle connected with the Pilgrim church, Old Spain, held their annual fair, in the vestry, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of last week. The attendance was very large, filling the vestry to overflowing. The programme for the evening was one of unusual interest, one of the most special attractions of each evening was a declamation by Miss Alice Snow, seven years old, her pieces being highly spoken of, and making a great impression on the audience.

"Wake up, Little Jessie!"

Past six o'clock in the morning,
And Jessie is still sound asleep;
Of this wonderful, rosy dawn,
She has not even a thought.
The birds near her window are wild;
With their efforts to wake the world;
In many a sweet comely child
Under the coverlid curled.

For they have been up since dawn
With fresh touch painted the east,
And from hill-side, meadow and lawn
Have gathered their morning bouquet.
How bright and gay are the flowers of the heart;
In many a sweet comely child
And now they are lonely for Jessie,
And are calling her out to play.

"Wake up, Little Jessie!" they cry,
And spring looks on the pane;
The fresh air is up in the sky;
The fresh out air here is the best.
At the very first glint of day
The birds sing out in the hills far away,
We sing good-bye to the fair day.
And welcomed the fair, rosy day.

"We looked to your window in crowds;
And tapped with our beaks on the pane;
We gave you a grand breakfast this morn,
And you were still fast asleep again.
We bathed in the broad, healthful hill,
And dressed all our feathers with care,
We sang good-bye to the fair, rosy day.
Find you sleeping so lately?

"We who are picking the berries,
The wild strawberries at the tree,
The thrush on the bough of the cherry,
Calls loudly for me to wake me;
The birds in the morn, when I am away,
When the flowers are all basking in dew,
To young life is fresh, bright and new."

Facts and Families.

Indiana has 215 printing offices.
Queen Victoria decries in the Court
Journal, that the name of her daughter, the Princess Helena, must be pronounced as Helena instead of Helen.

Miss Helena's cousin officer, ambitions to have his State property understand, reports that if the Lowell girls were laid endwise they would reach nineteen miles.

There is no better remedy for cold feet than to slap the leg briskly just above the knee after raising the foot.
The increased circulation induces immediately relief.

A convention is to be held in New Haven, to take measures for the establishment of a House of Industy for the orphan and homeless children of the State.

A boaster, who had been working at Iowa City, for eight years on a salary of $15 per month and fees, died the other day when it appeared that he had laid up about $5,000.

The Kansas House of Representatives has passed a bill to pardon all criminals to serve in their behalf, and husband and wife to give testimony in each other's behalf in criminal cases.

Daniel Drew, being on one of his own steamers, was accosted by a passenger, who took him for one of the crew, with the remark, "Do you belong to this boat?" "No," said Daniel quietly, "the boat belongs to me."

The Engineering Magazine says: "We are on the brink of a new era in railways—the era of the narrow gauge railway—an era of renewed activity, when every village, almost farmstead, may have its own railway station."

The blast furnace in Geddes, N. Y., is in a fix. The cupola or stock, has cooled down, with a full charge of ore, being smelted. It will take weeks to get the fire back in running order, and the loss will be large."

Here was a turn in affairs that would astonish old Girard himself. I tried to explain. Assured him that I supposed the Commissioners were about to receive their reward. He is going to return my money.
There was a sever look on his face as he came up to me, which did not accord at all with what I had pictured Girard's contenance to have worn when he gave me the carte blanche for coffee.

While reflecting on what it might be "his right back to my store,"

"It is coming now," though I did not quite like his tone. "Wheelbarrows are about to receive their reward. He is going to offer me a partnership; he wishes to turn over his entire business to me, and to make me his partner."

Then I said to the flour and feed man, (as though I didn't know you, know the clever things he made to do for me)
"May I inquire for what purpose, sir?"

"Certainly you may," replied the flour man, smiling. "We are to receive our share of the profits of the new gauge railway—
an era of renewed activity, when every village, almost farmstead, may have its own railway station."

Plain hair is rapidly becoming the fortunate girls who have ruined their crimping pins. There is a false sense of beauty in such hair, and we fear it will be adopted by many.

THE MARSHAL LADY'S PRIVATE COMPANION

CONTAINS 32 NUMBERS IN ADVANCE.

The component parts are BUCHU,

LONG LEAF, CUBEBS, JUNIPER BERRIES.

MORSE OF PREPARATION.—BUCHU, in vacuo

CUBEBS, by distillation, to form a fine spirit; CUBEBS, from Juniper Berries; very little sugar is used, and a small proportion of water.

It is more palatable than any now in use.

BUCHU as prepared by Druggists, is of a dark color. It is a plant that emits its fragrance, the action of a flame destroys this (its active principle), leaving a dark and glutinous decoction. Mine is the color of port-wine.

BUCHU in my preparation, however,

more than a small quantity of the other ingredients are added, and the fermentation, upon inspection it will be found not to be a Tincture, as made in Pharmacopeia, nor is it a Syrup,

and therefore can be used in cases where fever or inflammation exist. In this, you have the knowledge of the ingredients and the mode of preparation.

Hoping this will you will fit with a trial, and that upon inspection it will meet with your approbation.

I am, very respectfully,

H. T. HELMBOLD,

Chemist and Druggist of 19 Years' Experience.
